Nelson Lee

Nelson Lee the detective was created by Maxwell Scott around 1896, and featured in a number of adventures in Pluck, along the lines of those experienced by Sexton Blake, until Maxwell Scott fell out with its editor. He then featured in The Boys' Friend, Boys' Realm and Boy's Herald, the stories being written by Maxwell Scott and other Amalgamated Press authors, until 1915, when he was given his own library. Maxwell Scott objected to his character being used by other authors and was paid a substantial sum by AP to compensate him. The Nelson Lee ran until 1933, being re-launched three times, until it was amalgamated with the Gem.

St. Franks didn't appear on the scene until issue 112 in 1917, when Nelson Lee's case took him to the school. From that point on, St. Franks became the mainstay of the stories, with Nelson Lee as a housemaster, and his ward and assistant Nipper [Dick Hamilton] being captain of the Fourth, and narrator of the stories.

Stories were also written for the Detective Library in 1919-20, some early Greyfriars Holiday Annuals and the Nugget Library [c. 1921-1923]. The stories were reprinted in the Boy's Friend Library, the second series of the Popular, the Monster Library [monthly from November 1925], the Gem (as a serial) and the Schoolboy's Own Library.

These listings collect together all the Nelson Lee stories written in the Nelson Lee Library and those published elsewhere that consisted of either (a) reprints from the Nelson Lee Library or (b) stories mainly written by Edwy Searles Brooks.
